Spring gardening tips

in Catherine Park Estate

With spring having sprung, here are some expert spring gardening tips from the Catherine Park Estate horticulture team. Follow these tips and your garden will become the envy of your neighbours – even if you don't officially fancy yourself as an expert green thumb.

Spring cleaning

Before you get to the exciting stuff, do a thorough clean up. Remove fallen branches, leaves and other debris that has gathered over winter. If you have a water feature, give it a good scrub and sterilise.

Get grassing

Grass may not be the star attraction, but it needs regular attention. Use a garden fork or aerating tools to enable much-needed air, water and nutrients to penetrate the grass roots. Apply an organic weed killer to remove those oh so hearty weeds that constantly try to take over your lawn, and use a lawn fertiliser to help your grass live its best life.

Trim and prune

Get rid of branches, leaves and plants that haven't fared so well over winter to promote new growth. Your summer flowering shrubs such as hibiscus will benefit from a spring trim to ensure they bloom come summer.

Plant new flowers and shrubs

Now that your garden has received some spring TLC, focus on new plants. Lean towards planting more perennials as they will survive winter and last for a number of years.

Create a vege patch

Vege patches are a fun addition to every backyard, especially if you have children to share the experience with. Sydney's temperate spring weather is perfect for planting herbs (basil, chives, coriander, oregano, parsley) as well as everything from beans, beetroot and broccoli to capsicum, cucumber, tomatoes and sweet corn.
